The Standards were trialed in the Bathurst region (NSW) in late 2007 and the six organisations involved also provided valuable feedback.

Version 1.5 has been developed to ensure that resources listed in the document are current. Members of the taskforce in 2009, 2010, 2011, 2013, 2014 and 2016 contributed additional resources and amendments to web listings for existing resources through teleconferences and via the National Standards for Australian Museums & Galleries maNexus group. This group is a place to discuss the ongoing development of the National Standards for Australian Museums & Galleries. Anyone may take the opportunity to suggest updates and comment on proposed additions and revisions. If you would like to make a suggestion please join the the National Standards group at <http://manexus.ning.com/group/NSFAMG> Current National Standards Taskforce representatives are listed at Appendix F, page 106.

The Taskforce has taken great care to consider as wide a range of perspectives as possible, and to make use of feedback, so as to maximise the relevance of the National Standards to all Australian museums and galleries. INTRODUCTION

The National Standards for Australian Museums and Galleries are focused on key areas of activity common to organisations that care for collections and provide collection-based services to the community. The National Standards have been developed with the aim of supporting Australian museums and galleries in carrying out their day-to-day activities, meeting their responsibilities to their various stakeholders, attracting support, and achieving their other organisational objectives.

The museum and gallery community in Australia is diverse and includes large federally funded, and state- or territory-funded, institutions; museums and galleries operating within government agencies, local government, universities, or not-for-profit organisations (such as religious institutions); museums and galleries that operate as not-for-profit bodies in their own right; and volunteer-managed organisations. Museums and galleries exist in every imaginable Australian setting: from small regional towns through to busy city centres, from universities to sports clubs. The funds and facilities that these myriad organisations have to work with vary, as do their staffing levels and levels of volunteer support. The development of the National Standards has been guided at all times by a recognition of this diversity.

For the sake of simplicity and consistency, this document uses the term museum when referring to any organisation that meets the Museums Australia definition of a museum (see Appendix A). The term worker refers to any person working in a museum, whether on a paid basis or as a volunteer (see Glossary).

DEVELOPING THE NATIONAL STANDARDS

The National Standards for Australian Museums and Galleries was developed by the National Standards Taskforce (see Appendix B) in consultation with the museum sector and with reference to current museum practice, existing core standards, and museum development and accreditation programs. The result is an up-to-date set of agreed Standards that are broad in their scope and are designed to be an accessible tool for museums nationwide.

There is no plan to deliver the Standards through a national accreditation scheme, or to monitor their use at a national level. They have already been incorporated into several state-based museum development and accreditation programs, and it is envisaged that in the future they will also be used by networks of like-minded museums, as well as by individual organisations.

SHAPING THE NATIONAL STANDARDS OVER TIME

The National Standards Taskforce will continually review this document so that it remains relevant to the needs of Australian museums.

Collecting organisations of all kinds are invited to use the National Standards framework as a practical point of reference, and are encouraged to continue providing feedback, contributing their insights, and reporting on their experiences, as the Standards continue to be developed (see Appendix F).

Contact details for Taskforce members in each state and territory are provided in Appendix F.

STRUCTURE AND SCOPE OF THE NATIONAL STANDARDS

The National Standards have been developed around nine guiding Principles, with each being articulated through a series of Standards and benchmarks. Extra layers of information are provided in the form of tips and resources/ references.

The Standards are structured in three parts. 'Managing the Museum' is concerned with various facets of museum management, from governance to day-to-day operations, resource management and future planning. 'Involving People' addresses the role of the museum in engaging and involving visitors and the wider community. 'Developing a Significant Collection' focuses on collection management and conservation.

Importantly, the Standards offer museums opportunities for development in the longer term, and can help museums to identify priorities and develop policies, plans and procedures that will allow them to manage their activities effectively and to achieve their goals. Benchmarks identified in this document can be incorporated into a museum's planning in manageable stages, as resources become available.

USING THE NATIONAL STANDARDS

This document is intended to be freely available to all of Australia's many museums.

Museums operate in many different ways and in many different settings, with varying levels of resources. It is understood that museums will use or address the National Standards for Australian Museums and Galleries in a range of ways.

The National Standards may be used to:

- Understand principles and standards of vital importance to museum development and management.
The three parts, nine Principles and thirty-nine Standards within the document capture and explain core industry standards and practices.
- Identify what can be done towards meeting specific Standards.
Benchmarks, tips and resources provide guidance on attaining or researching specific Standards.
- Review the museum.
Staff, volunteers or external reviewers might use one or all parts and/or Standards as a basis for a review of operations. The review process may vary in length, depending on whether all parts are under consideration, or simply one area of operation.
- Advocate for resources to meet Standards.
The document may be useful for advocacy to governing bodies, different levels of government, and departments, regarding museum needs such as equipment, facilities and staffing.
- Gain leverage to enhance access to funding.
The document can provide a rigorous context for funding applications.
- Help make the museum more sustainable.
The document embodies the principle of a sustainable museum sector and therefore could support or measure a museum's commitment to this aim.
- Identify areas to improve.
With Standards clearly set out, the document allows museums to discover areas of operation that could be initiated, developed or improved.
- Promote achievements within the museum.
The document has potential to allow museums to better identify, communicate, celebrate and promote benchmarks they have met.
- Raise the museum's profile with local, state/territory or federal government.
The document contains Standards relating to promotion and networking, as well as forward planning with reference to government strategies and policies.

- Enhance the museum’s credibility, recognition and status within its local community.
The document may assist museums in long-term strategic planning and in positioning themselves within their local community.
- Increase community confidence in the capacity of the museum.
Many sectors within the community access industry standards, and so national standards for museums may provide an avenue for better and broader community recognition and support of museums, their services and their development over time.

MUSEUM DEVELOPMENT AND ACCREDITATION PROGRAMS

In a number of states, the National Standards are incorporated in existing programs such as the Standards Program for Sustainable Community Museums, delivered by Museums & Galleries of NSW and Museums & Galleries Queensland, the History SA Community Museums Program (CMP), and Museums Australia (Victoria)’s Museum Accreditation Program (MAP).

Being state-based, each program maintains its own approach and aims in being responsive to the specific context, needs and interests of the local museum sector. The programs range from those that aim to accredit a wide variety of participating museums through to those that focus on providing a developmental process for the volunteer museum sector. The programs use the National Standards to support museums in identifying their strengths alongside aspects that require further improvement.

STANDARDS AND DIFFERENT TYPES OF MUSEUMS

The nine Principles of the National Standards reflect the minimum areas in which museums should normally be working. In some cases, museums may choose to focus on a particular aspect of the Standards that best reflects their operations or relates to an area of operation that has been identified for improvement.

Small collections

A government agency with a small art collection may not have a great capacity to interact directly with the broader community through that collection (as per Part B of the Standards, ‘Involving People’). Instead, the government agency may want to focus on collection management (as outlined in Part C, ‘Developing a Significant Collection’). Alternatively, Part B may present some new opportunities that complement or enhance existing activities.

A heritage building or site with a very small collection of objects and a strong program of public events may find that its operations are better reflected in Part A, ‘Managing the Museum’, and Part B, ‘Involving People’.

Volunteer-managed museums

For volunteer-managed museums, the National Standards can be used to self-assess current operations and identify future directions for the museum. In particular, the Standards may highlight new possibilities. These could be incorporated into short- or long-term plans to improve the museum. The Standards can also be used to identify training needs and skills gaps within the workforce of a volunteer-managed museum. Once these needs have been identified, it is easier to articulate them to governing bodies, committees of management, funding bodies, and other sources of support.

Museums within larger organisations

For museums operating within a local government framework, some activities, such as human resources and financial matters, will be managed by other departments. Similarly, planning is often required to fit in with local government strategic, social and cultural plans. This area is addressed particularly in Part A of the National Standards, 'Managing the Museum', where benchmarks such as A1.1.1 ('The museum operates within an appropriate legal framework') and A2.6.2 ('Workplace Health and Safety (WHS) obligations are fulfilled') may be reflected in local government-wide processes rather than those managed solely by the museum.

For those working under the umbrella of a larger organisation such as local government, a state/territory or federal government agency, a university or a not-for-profit entity, the Standards may be used to outline to senior management the necessity of certain processes to the sound operation of the museum, or to guide the development of a new museum.

National and state/territory institutions

For state/territory and federally funded museums, the National Standards can be used as part of an induction process for new staff, and for others (e.g. new board members) who may not be familiar with museum operations. The Standards can also be used to communicate to government the importance of specific industry requirements and common terminology.

PRINCIPLE A1 THE MUSEUM HAS A SOUND LEGAL AND MANAGEMENT FRAMEWORK THAT FOLLOWS RECOGNISED MUSEUM ETHICS AND PROTOCOLS

STANDARD A1.1 The museum is properly constituted.

BENCHMARK A1.1.1 The museum operates within an appropriate legal framework.

TIPS

To be considered properly constituted, a museum needs to:

- have its own constitution or
- be part of a properly constituted body, such as an incorporated association, a company or a government agency (which may provide terms of reference for a museum committee) or
- be constituted by an Act of Parliament.

BENCHMARK A1.1.2 The body responsible for the governance of the museum is a legally constituted entity.

TIPS

For example, an incorporated body. Incorporation Acts exist in each state and territory.

The entity is normally the legal owner of the museum's collection.

Workplace health and safety (WHS) obligations are fulfilled.

TIPS

It is essential that museums have up-to-date WHS policies and procedures in place.

WHS legislation is specific to each state and territory, so regional variations may apply.

Strategies for ensuring that WHS obligations are met could include the following (please note that some of these strategies are compulsory under state/territory legislation):

- take all necessary steps to ensure that working conditions for museum workers are not unsafe, hazardous or inadequate
- ensure that safety precautions are signed off by relevant workers
- appoint an WHS officer or committee
- provide workers with relevant information on, and training in, WHS policies and procedures (including how to manage and report issues of concern, WHS-related incidents, or accidents)
- consult directly with workers on matters relating to their health and safety, and advise workers that they can refuse to undertake work they consider unsafe
- use risk assessment forms
- use action sheets
- use report forms, or another formal process, for reporting issues of concern, incidents, or accidents
- conduct regular drills on emergency evacuation procedures
- provide adequate training and supervision for workers operating objects or exhibits that are 'activated' or demonstrated as part of the museum's programs (e.g. a steam engine)
- have in place formal procedures whereby the museum responds to any reports by workers about the need for additional safety precautions in relation to activated objects or exhibits
- keep all required safety accreditation and maintenance records in relation to activated objects or exhibits (including safe operating procedures documentation, and maintenance logbooks).

For insurance and recovery purposes, it is useful to identify, value and photograph:

- key items of equipment
- other infrastructure.

BENCHMARK A3.1.7

Additional workers are called on for special projects, as required.

TIPS

A museum might engage external experts as:

- commissioned artists
- consultants
- contractors
- volunteers.

These experts might include:

- accountants
- actors
- artisans
- artists
- auditors
- conservators
- editors

STANDARD A3.2 The museum defines and communicates the duties, rights and responsibilities of the museum and its workers.

BENCHMARK A3.2.1 Written statements define the duties, conditions of engagement, rights and responsibilities of:

- the museum
- paid workers
- volunteer workers.

TIPS

Paid workers should be provided with a written Conditions of Employment document and this should reflect federal and state requirements.

The responsibilities and rights of volunteers may be detailed in a volunteer policy or a volunteer agreement, both of which should acknowledge the efforts of volunteers and explain how the museum counts volunteer hours.

A volunteer policy might also cover:

- information about who volunteers report to
- information about insurance for volunteers
- induction procedures and training opportunities.

All of this information could be brought together in a human resources manual, with other relevant resources.

BENCHMARK A3.2.2 New workers receive an induction on their specific roles and tasks, and on the organisation.

TIPS

A museum may partly meet the induction needs of new workers by providing them with a comprehensive and user-friendly induction kit or manual that contains all of the museum's relevant current policies, and the code of ethics under which the museum operates. New workers should sign a statement declaring that they have read and understood the museum's policies and procedures, and the code of ethics that the museum follows.

STANDARD A3.3

The museum acknowledges that museum work involves special skills, and gives workers opportunities to acquire or enhance these skills.

BENCHMARK A3.3.1

The museum considers the skills required for its current and future activities, identifies gaps, and plans training for current workers.

TIPS

A suitable technique for this may be a skills audit. Performance evaluations, both for workers and for members of a museum's governing body, can provide helpful information on their skills.

BENCHMARK A3.3.2

Appropriate training is provided for workers, and its costs are subsidised by the museum where possible.

TIPS

Training can take many forms, including:

- providing access to industry journals, websites and other sources
- formal inductions
- mentoring
- supporting workers to attend refresher courses, seminars and workshops presented by peak bodies, and conferences.

Keep in mind the training needs not only of paid museum workers but also of members of the museum's governing body, and of volunteers (those who work 'front of house', as well as those who work behind the scenes). Peak bodies, professional associations, and networks, support excellence in the museum sector by providing many opportunities for workers and others to exchange ideas and to access training.

BENCHMARK A3.3.3

Up-to-date records are kept of training programs attended by museum workers.

BENCHMARK A3.3.4

Manuals, and other resources on museum practice, are available for workers.

BENCHMARK A3.3.5

Experienced workers are encouraged to act as mentors.

TIPS

The work of mentors can complement or follow on from formal training.

TIPS

Strategies to consider:

- conserve energy by switching off appliances and power points when not in use
- provide recycling bins (or access to off-site recycling facilities)
- dispose appropriately of hazardous waste (e.g. paint)
- adopt passive energy design for new building works or site maintenance programs (e.g. insulation, external blinds, or replacing trees).

A sustainability policy may help to define and guide the museum's approach to these issues.

- tools and maintenance equipment.

BENCHMARK A4.3.8

There is a written policy on the commercial use of the museum's assets.

TIPS

Commercial uses might include:

- commercial filming or photography on, or of, the premises
- the lease of buildings on the premises
- the selling of merchandise.

PART B: INVOLVING PEOPLE

PRINCIPLE B1 THE MUSEUM IS USED, SUPPORTED AND VALUED BY DIVERSE COMMUNITIES AS A WORTHWHILE PLACE WHERE PEOPLE CAN EXPRESS, SHARE AND DISCOVER SIGNIFICANT STORIES, IDEAS AND OBJECTS

STANDARD B1.1 The museum includes a range of people in its operations and programs.

BENCHMARK B1.1.1 Efforts are made to represent the diversity of the museum's community in the governing body, management and workforce of the museum.

TIPS

Museums can gain a sense of the diversity in the wider community by researching statistics on age, cultural background, disability, education, employment status, gender, income and special interests.

Keep in mind that there are a whole range of barriers to people getting involved, including cultural background, working hours, and concerns about feeling welcome.

Consider targeting those who are not already represented in the museum's audiences. You might look at this from a range of viewpoints: for example, in terms of the benefits to the museum of involving people with different skills, life experiences, and networks. Diversity, social inclusion and equity are other factors to take into account.

Representatives and members of local and/or specialist organisations and communities are invited to contribute their knowledge, insights and expertise to museum planning, collection development, and programs.

TIPS

Organisations and communities might include:

- government departments or agencies (e.g. economic, tourism, and marketing boards); local council representatives; education bodies; Indigenous and cultural/linguistic groups
- service groups; access advocacy organisations; child-care and youth groups; clubs; aged care and disability facilities; businesses; arts and environmental groups

- individuals, including artists, scientists, historians, educators, parents and caregivers.

Contributions might involve:

- being members of advisory committees, or of event or exhibition teams
- contributing their own displays and activities
- identifying significant material held in the collection
- providing advice and information relevant to their history and culture.

Depending on the organisation or community, it may be useful to work together to create a formal memorandum of understanding.

A practical way to gain input is through informal meetings. Consider meeting times that respect participants' other commitments.

Useful documents to develop might include:

- an exhibition policy and schedule
- an interpretation plan or strategy.

Some museums may find it useful to draw on:

- a statement of cultural heritage significance
- a regional history
- regional thematic studies.

BENCHMARK B2.3.2 Objects on display are arranged to convey significant collection areas, themes, stories and ideas.

TIPS

Objects can be grouped or arranged to convey their significance, or to:

- help provide context for each other (e.g. a photo of a room might accompany a specific piece of furniture)
- support or contradict other historical evidence (e.g. an original building plan and a description of the building)
- convey ideas presented in exhibition text, a brochure or other interpretive materials (e.g. by demonstrating how an object was used).

A museum can keep creating new points of interest and meaning by changing the ways in which objects are grouped, so that they present different themes or stories.

PART C: DEVELOPING A SIGNIFICANT COLLECTION

PRINCIPLE C1 THE MUSEUM'S COLLECTION REPRESENTS THE SIGNIFICANT STORIES AND INTERESTS OF ITS DIVERSE AND CHANGING COMMUNITIES

STANDARD C1.1 The museum develops its collection to reflect its unique purpose and the significant stories and interests of its diverse and changing communities.

BENCHMARK C1.1.1 Key collection areas are based on the museum's Statement of Purpose, key topics, themes and stories, and the communities it serves.

TIPS

An outline of the following benchmarks might appear in the preamble to the museum's collection policy, which might also refer to the histories and cultures of the diverse local communities (including Indigenous and culturally and linguistically diverse communities) represented within the collection.

Collections tend to develop at different rates. For instance, the nature of some bequests, sub-collections and 'closed collections' (such as those of house museums) may mean that little or no new material is ever added.

Other collection areas may require an active program to address gaps (e.g. under-represented time periods, local groups, themes or stories).

BENCHMARK C1.1.2 The collection policy and procedures explain procedures and criteria with regard to:

- access
- acquisitions
- cataloguing
- conservation
- copyright issues
- deaccessioning
- disposal
- documentation
- loans
- oral history
- resource, education or secondary collections
- storage.

TIPS

Access in this context is about how people can access the collection and its records. You might have a general museum access policy to refer to, and keep in mind that access is a principle that applies to a range of issues. It can be useful to cross-reference your access policy with policies and guiding documents such as a preventive conservation policy and codes of ethics.

STANDARD C1.2

The museum knows the significance of its collection.

BENCHMARK C1.2.1

Decisions about acquisitions, deaccessioning and care of the collection are informed by significance assessments.

TIPS

Remember to ask donors everything you can about items when you acquire them.

At the point of acquisition, an object file is begun, to which you progressively add research on the object. Where object files have not been established for the collection, research to inform significance assessments of selected objects should be undertaken.

| BENCHMARK | C2.1.2 | A preventive conservation strategy is in place. |
|------------------|---------------|--|

TIPS

This strategy is informed by an initial risk assessment and an understanding of significance, and might include:

- definitions of conservation, restoration and preservation
- priorities
- measures to reduce light levels on light-sensitive collection items
- a cleaning regime and roster for display and storage areas
- regular inspections for damp and pests, dust and pollution
- shelter for significant outdoor exhibits, where appropriate
- an integrated pest management (IPM) program
- procedures for dealing with mould or pest infestations
- WHS issues.

It makes sense to consider the broader museum setting and purpose too. For instance, if reduced light levels are desirable for some objects, what strategies could be used to keep exhibition text visible or accessible in that setting?

BENCHMARK C2.2.1 Approaches to storage and display show appropriate understanding of the collection's condition and the environmental requirements of individual items.

TIPS

Environmental considerations include:

- dust and other pollutants
- humidity
- light levels
- temperature levels and fluctuations.

Collections will include items composed of different materials (e.g. wood, paper, textiles and metals), each having different conservation requirements and risks.

These issues are also essential considerations for touring exhibitions.

Conditions in exhibition and storage areas are regularly monitored, recorded and assessed in light of the collection's conservation requirements, and damage or potential damage is reported and followed up.

TIPS

Information on issues affecting specific collection items (e.g. particular conservation needs, or incidents such as pest infestation or water damage) can be recorded in object files and on databases.

For future reference, it is important to document key events that have impacted on the collection (e.g. a leak, cyclone or other disaster) and to add this information to records of the museum's history.

Although collecting and recording relevant information about environmental conditions is vital, the key here is to ensure that improvements are made as a result of this knowledge.

Two examples of follow-up are:

- making changes to display and storage areas
- seeking advice from a qualified conservator.

APPENDIX A WHAT IS A MUSEUM?

The Museums Australia Constitution (2002) defines a 'museum' as an institution with the following characteristics:

A museum helps people understand the world by using objects and ideas to interpret the past and present and explore the future. A museum preserves and researches collections, and makes objects and information accessible in actual and virtual environments. Museums are established in the public interest as permanent, not-for-profit organisations that contribute long-term value to communities.

Museums Australia recognises that museums of science, history and art may be designated by many other names (including Gallery and Keeping Place). In addition, the following may qualify as museums for the purposes of this definition:

- (a) natural, archaeological and ethnographic monuments and sites and historical monuments and sites of a museum nature that acquire, conserve and communicate material evidence of people and their environment;
- (b) institutions holding collections of and displaying specimens of plants and animals, such as botanical and zoological gardens, herbaria, aquaria and vivaria;
- (c) science centres;
- (d) cultural centres and other entities that facilitate the preservation, continuation and management of tangible or intangible heritage resources (living heritage and digital creative activity);
- (e) such other institutions as the [Museums Australia National] Council considers as having some or all of the characteristics of a museum.

In its Code of Ethics [2013], the International Council of Museums (ICOM) describes a museum as:

a non-profit making permanent institution in the service of society and of its development, open to the public, which acquires, conserves, researches, communicates and exhibits, for purposes of study, education and enjoyment, the tangible and intangible evidence of people and their environment.

Access

Providing access means making a museum, its buildings, its collection and its programs physically and/or virtually available, and intellectually engaging, to the widest possible range of people, while also fulfilling the museum's other responsibilities (e.g. ensuring the preservation and security of its collection, and the safety of visitors and workers).

Accession

The process of registering and cataloguing an object into a museum's collection.

Accession register

A book – used at the first stage of the accessioning process – in which objects are recorded as they are added to a museum's collection. Cataloguing follows.

Acquisition

The process of gaining legal possession of an item for a museum collection, through purchase, donation, bequest or transfer.

Acquisition policy

See Collection policy.

Adaptive technologies

Devices or technologies (such as voice-recognition software) that can assist people with disabilities to access information and/or technology.

AICCM

The Australian Institute for the Conservation of Cultural Material is the national organisation for conservators and others interested in the preservation of cultural material.

Archival image

A digital image (also referred to as a master image) that has been captured at the most appropriate quality or resolution, and stored for long-term usage. Archival images are normally stored in an offline mode – on tape, CD or DVD – or on an independent hard drive, and are accessed only for the production of copies.

Archives

The term archives encompasses:

- (a) records of organisations and individuals that have been selected for indefinite retention on the basis of their continuing value for legal, administrative, financial or historical research purposes
- (b) the name given to the repository in which an archival collection resides
- (c) an organisation (or part of an organisation) whose main function is to select, manage, preserve and make archival records available for use.

Asset

A document, picture, artefact, specimen or artwork that has been acquired by a museum for its collection is considered a heritage asset. Other kinds of museum assets include buildings, sites and equipment.

Audiences

Current

People who visit a museum (including online visitors). A museum's current audience may be segmented into audience groupings (e.g. local residents, school students, tourists, families, retirees, and special interest groups).

Potential

People who do not currently visit the museum but are thought likely to attend in the future, because of their interests or demographics. The museum may target its potential audiences, and may plan to attract them through specific programs designed to meet their needs.

Benchmark

A reference point or criterion against which to measure performance, achievement or progress.

Blog

An online journal that is frequently updated by its creator and is usually open for contributions from the general public. (Short for web log.)

Born digital

Term used to describe information expressed in a digital format from the point of its creation. Forms of visual or literary expression created using digital technology or digital media are born-digital materials. Other examples include websites, web pages, email messages, and word-processed documents.

Burra Charter

The Australia ICOMOS Charter for the Conservation of Places of Cultural Significance, adopted in Burra, South Australia, in 1979. The Charter was revised in 1981, 1988, 1999 and 2013.

Business plan

See Forward plan.

Cataloguing

The process of recording and filing/storing all known, relevant information about an object in a museum collection, such as its origin, age, maker, title (e.g. for artworks), physical description (materials and/or techniques used in its making), physical dimensions, use, provenance, etc. These details are recorded on cataloguing worksheets or onto a computer database.

Code of ethics

A formal set of principles, rules or expectations developed to help people and organisations to make appropriate, ethical decisions in relation to behaviour and practices within a specific profession, industry or specialisation.

Collection

The body of acquired objects held in title by a museum.

Collection management

A term encompassing all of the practices and procedures implemented by a museum in acquiring, documenting, handling, accessing, storing, securing, lending, conserving and disposing of collection items.

Collection policy

A written statement guiding a museum's aims, practices and procedures in managing its collection. The collection policy also identifies the kinds of materials a museum will collect and the conditions or terms governing acquisitions.

Community

A social group, of any size, whose members have something in common (e.g. culture, history, experiences, ideas, interests or locality).

Community access exhibitions

Exhibitions designed to enable a diverse range of individuals and community groups to present their artworks, culture, ideas or activities to a wider audience. Sometimes museums set aside an exhibition space for exhibitions of this type, and/or especially encourage exhibitions by marginalised or minority groups.

Conflict of interest

A situation where the interests of an individual working for, or representing, an organisation compete with that organisation's interests, putting at risk the reputation of all concerned. Inappropriate use of benefits or advantages that the individual gains through this association, or of privileged information that he or she has access to, are potential consequences of conflict of interest.

Conservation

All action aimed at safeguarding cultural material for the future. The purpose of conservation is to study, record, retain and, if appropriate, restore the culturally significant qualities of an object, with the least possible intervention. Issues around treatment, handling, storage and display are all encompassed within conservation. See also Preservation, Preventive conservation and Restoration.

Conservation policy

A written statement guiding a museum's aims, practices and procedures in regard to conserving its collection. A conservation policy generally covers conservation needs and priorities, treatment, and the handling, storage and display of objects.

Conservation treatment

The physical treatment of collection items to prolong their existence by preventing or slowing down deterioration. Treatment is undertaken only after an assessment of the current condition of an item, its significance, its future use, and available resources and expertise, and after the preparation of a treatment proposal. Where possible, any materials and methods used in a treatment should allow it to be reversible and should allow for the possibility of future treatments.

Conservator

A professional whose primary occupation is the practice of conservation and who, through specialised education, knowledge, training and experience, formulates and implements all the activities of conservation, in accordance with an ethical code such as the AICCM Code of Ethics and Code of Practice. Through their training, conservators have an understanding of the principles of the conservation of most materials, but tend to specialise in the treatment of one type of object or material.

Constitution

A written, publicly available statement of a museum's charter, role, goals, policy framework, and composition.

Contractor

A person or a firm that supplies labour, services or materials to an organisation, for a fee and on terms set out in a written agreement or contract. Museums often engage contractors for their specialised skills and knowledge, to support or carry out a specific project or service. This is normally a short-term arrangement. See also Volunteer and Workers.

Copyright

The exclusive right, granted by law for a specified number of years, to produce copies of, and to otherwise control, an original literary, musical or artistic work.

Core documents and policies

The main documents and policies that guide and inform a museum's activities.

Corporate plan

See Forward plan.

Curator

A person who works with collection items and associated material to develop a museum's collection and/or exhibitions, and who seeks to communicate related information, ideas and values to the public.

Customer focus

Planning and managing museum programs and services so as to meet the needs and interests of the people who will be accessing them, and to encourage positive customer/visitor experiences.

Deaccession

The process by which an object in a museum's collection is removed from the collection. When deaccessioning objects, museums must ensure that all legal requirements are met and that the objects are made ready for disposal in an appropriate and ethical way.

Deaccession policy

A written statement guiding a museum's aims, practices and procedures in respect of deaccession. A museum's deaccession policy is usually part of its collection policy.

Deductible gift recipient (DGR)

A fund or organisation that can receive tax-deductible gifts through the Australian Taxation Office Deductible Gift Recipients scheme.

Digital archiving

See Archival image.

Digital imaging

The process of creating and/or manipulating digital images.

Digital preservation

The long-term maintenance of digital files on digital storage media, including upgrades when necessary.

Digitisation

The process of converting information into a digital format. For example, taking a digital photograph of a painting, or scanning a catalogue record, are both digitisation activities (also referred to as image capture). Digital material produced by digitisation can be referred to as 'made digital' (as distinct from 'born digital').

Disaster preparedness and response plan

A document that identifies potential risks or sources of damage to a museum's collection and facilities, together with ways to remove or reduce these risks. The plan lists actions to be taken to minimise all risks, and actions to be taken in dealing with specific emergency situations. It includes emergency contacts for assistance, supplies and equipment.

Disposal

The formal removal of an item from a museum collection after a deaccessioning decision has been made. Disposal must occur in accordance with the procedures and conditions outlined in the deaccession policy.

Diversity

Term used in relation to communities made up of different and varied groups. Factors such as age, gender, education level, employment status, income, cultural background, disability and special interests, in respect of current and potential visitors, are all useful for museums in planning programs to address the needs and interests of diverse communities.

Doubt

Sometimes a museum may not have supporting research or facts to corroborate its interpretation of objects or events, in exhibitions or other programs. Doubt can be acknowledged by using qualifying wording such as 'It is believed that' or 'Some people think that' on labels or in other interpretive information. Using the term circa (or c.) with dates is another strategy.

Education kit

Information and activities compiled for school or other groups to use in conjunction with a visit to a museum or an exhibition, or as a learning resource.

Education policy

A written statement outlining a museum's aims, philosophy, practices and procedures in providing programs related to education. The policy would ideally be much broader than a statement about programs for schools and should incorporate ideas about lifelong learning for all visitors.

Ethics

See Code of ethics.

Evaluation

Evaluation is a process to assess the merit or value of an activity against particular criteria, so as to inform planning and decision making. In the museum context, visitor research is used to assess visitors' perceptions of the merit of a museum's programs and services, and can be carried out at various stages of a program, to report on and if necessary improve its effectiveness.

Exhibition

Objects, words, images, interactive units, audiovisual techniques and other methods combined to communicate an idea, theme or story for public interest and enjoyment.

Exhibition/display plan

A written plan for the exhibitions and displays a museum will present over a period of time, for example 3–5 years. An exhibition/display plan could include an interpretation or exhibition/display policy, an exhibition schedule, practices and procedures in relation to the maintenance of long-term displays, display plans, and exhibition proposals.

Fabric

See Heritage places and fabric.

Forward plan

A written plan that sets out what a museum aims to achieve in the future. The term covers the many different types of such plans that can be developed – with different purposes, outcomes, audiences and stakeholders in mind – so it is used as a generic designation in this document. Types of forward plan include:

Business plan

A plan that outlines an organisation's goals, the work program and the resources (particularly financial) required to achieve them, and how those resources will be sourced or developed.

Corporate plan

A comprehensive forward plan that covers the whole of the organisation and may incorporate all other plans for its management and development.

Strategic plan

A document produced by an organisation (or a division or department of an organisation) that defines a desired future and the means to bring it about. For museums, this type of forward plan guides success in terms of the organisation's political, financial, social and technological setting, and the demands of a competitive environment.

Friends

Supporters of a museum, who usually contribute through an independently constituted organisation (such as an incorporated association), to which they pay an annual subscription fee. See also Members and Volunteer.

Governance

The process by which a formal authority, such as a board, oversees and directs the policies, functions, actions and affairs of a museum.

Governing body

The group of people who are responsible for the policies, priorities and decisions of a museum (e.g. a museum council, trust or board).

Heritage places and fabric

Places of significance, such as sites, landscapes, areas, monuments and buildings, to be cared for, and retained, for future generations. Each heritage place has its own fabric or physical material, which may include natural elements, pathways, structures, structural materials, building interiors, sub-surface material, surface treatments, fittings or fixtures.

ICOM

The International Council of Museums is 'the international organisation of museums and museum professionals which is committed to the conservation, continuation and communication to society of the world's natural and cultural heritage, present and future, tangible and intangible' (source: ICOM website).

Image capture

See Digitisation.

Intellectual property

An intangible asset such as a copyright or patent. See also Copyright.

INTERPOL

Founded as the International Criminal Police Commission, INTERPOL is 'the world's largest international police organization, with 186 member countries. Created in 1923, it facilitates cross-border police co-operation, and supports and assists all organizations, authorities and services whose mission is to prevent or combat international crime' (source: INTERPOL website).

Interpretation

A process involving both the museum and its visitors in understanding and communicating the meaning and significance of objects, collections and places. Modes of interpretation include tours, exhibitions, education programs, publications, social media and websites.

Item

A generic term that covers museum collection items including documents, pictures, artefacts, specimens, artworks and other objects. Item is also a specific archival term, describing the smallest discrete unit of record material; accumulated items form a record series.

Key collection areas

The main types of objects, material or themes that a museum collection focuses on.

Legally constituted entity

An organisation or governing body that is formed, appointed or established through a legal process.

Loans

Items a museum lends to, or borrows from, other collecting organisations, private collectors, or agencies.

Loans policy

A written statement outlining a museum's aims, practices and procedures in relation to inward and outward loans. The loans policy is normally part of a museum's collection policy.

Marketing plan

A type of written plan that focuses on identifying current and potential audiences and finding strategies to reach and attract them to a museum by addressing their interests and needs.

Master image

See Archival image.

Members

Supporters of a museum who contribute through paid subscriptions to a program that is managed by the museum and is intended to encourage interest and involvement in its activities and issues. Membership can deliver privileges such as discounts and access to news, information and special events. Unlike a Friends group, a members group does not exist independently of the museum it is associated with. See also Friends and Volunteer.

Metadata

Data about data, or information assembled in relation to an item in order to provide access to it. Metadata usually includes information about the intellectual content of the item, digital representation data (where appropriate), and security or rights management information. In the museum context, the term is commonly used with respect to digital collections. A universal standard for metadata is the Dublin Core.

Moveable cultural heritage

A term used to describe any portable natural or manufactured object of heritage significance.

Moveable cultural heritage, being portable, is especially vulnerable because it can easily be sold, relocated or thrown away during changes in ownership, fashion and use. Moveable heritage may be closely related to the significance of heritage places.

Museum

See Appendix A.

Object ID

'An international standard for describing cultural objects. It has been developed through the collaboration of the museum community, police and customs agencies, the art trade, insurance industry, and valuers of art and antiques. The Object ID project was initiated by the J. Paul Getty Trust in 1993 and the standard was launched in 1997. It is being promoted by major law enforcement agencies, including the FBI, Scotland Yard and Interpol; museum, cultural heritage, art trade and art appraisal organisations; and insurance companies' (source: Object ID website).

Operational plan

A type of written plan for developing or maintaining the infrastructure a museum needs in order to achieve its potential. Examples of operational plans include a workforce management plan, used in creating and managing a major change in an organisation's staffing structure; a disaster preparedness and response plan; or a safe-working plan, used in managing the activated display of heritage (or contemporary) machinery, and addressing issues such as the licensing of operators, OH&S, and public liability and other insurance.

Orientation

The way visitors find their way around a museum. Museums can help by providing tools such as maps, brochures, signage, computer terminals or tour guides. For the visitor, physical orientation involves finding his or her way around a museum site. Conceptual orientation is a term used in relation to displays or exhibitions, where the museum might present key concepts and messages in exhibition text or through other forms of interpretation.

Podcast

A method of publishing audio files on the internet so that people can download them onto computers or personal digital audio devices and listen to them whenever they want to.

Policy

A written statement guiding a museum's aims, practices and procedures in relation to specific activities, such as collection management, providing public access, conservation, education and interpretation.

Preservation

Different professions and organisations use this term in different ways. Here are two common definitions:

(a) All action taken to slow deterioration of, or prevent damage to, cultural material. Preservation may involve controlling the environment and conditions of use, and may include treatment in order to, as nearly as possible, maintain an object in an unchanging state.

In the case of archival material, moving image and sound, preservation may include transfer to another medium.

(b) All action aimed at safeguarding cultural material for the future. The purpose of preservation is to study, record, retain and restore the culturally significant qualities of an object, with the least possible intervention. Issues around treatment, handling, storage and display are all encompassed within preservation.

Note: The terms conservation and preservation are often used interchangeably. This document uses conservation as the overarching term, while preservation (as per definition (a) above) refers to treatment-based activities. See also Conservation and Restoration.

Preventive conservation

All action undertaken to prevent the deterioration of cultural material and collections. Preventive conservation involves developing and following policies and procedures in relation to: appropriate environmental conditions; handling and maintenance during storage, display/exhibition, packing, transport and use; integrated pest management (IPM); disaster preparedness and response; and reformatting/duplication.

Procedure

An established way to approach or undertake an activity.

Promotional methods

Methods of promoting a museum and its activities, including advertising, brochures and flyers, web presence, direct mail, listings in local or regional tourism brochures, media releases, newspaper articles, public talks, and radio or television interviews.

Prop

An object – not in itself a collection item – that is used to support or help present collection items in a museum display or exhibition. Props are not subject to the same considerations as collection items (e.g. conservation). Examples of props include mannequins and objects intended for visitors to touch or use. See also Replica, Reproduction and Resource, education or secondary collection.

Public programs

All the ways a museum communicates with the public, including on-site and off-site displays and exhibitions, tours, workshops, activity sessions, demonstrations, talks, performances, websites, multimedia, publications and events.

Replica

An exact or faithful copy of an object, especially on a smaller scale. The term is usually used in reference to three-dimensional objects (e.g. 'The ship is an exact replica of the original Golden Hind'). See also Reproduction.

Reproduction

An exact or close imitation of a work of art, generally two-dimensional, as in a publication or document or on an exhibition wall panel (e.g. 'The book contains excellent colour reproductions of Monet's paintings'). See also Replica.

Resource, education or secondary collection

Objects that do not meet a museum's acquisition criteria but are acquired and maintained for use as display props, in education programs, or for use or exchange to support the conservation of the formally acquired museum collection. Museums use a range of names for these kinds of adjunct collections.

Restoration

The actions taken to return cultural material (objects) to a known or assumed earlier state. Restoration may involve the reassembly of displaced components, removal of extraneous matter (such as later additions or concretions), or reintegration (repair) using new materials (e.g. infilling holes or areas of loss). See also Conservation and Preservation.

Risk assessment

The review and identification of all potential hazards, and sources of danger or loss, that could affect a museum's collections, workers, visitors, site, buildings, assets and operations.

Risk management

Having policies and procedures in place to assess, remove and/or minimise risks, and to deal effectively and responsibly with unforeseen events.

Significance

The historical, aesthetic, scientific or social values that a museum object or collection has for past, present and future generations.

Significance assessment

The process of studying and understanding the meanings and values of a museum object or collection, enabling the development of sound and reasoned judgements and statements about the importance of objects and collections, and their meanings for communities.

Skills audit

The process of formally identifying the skills and knowledge that workers have, in order to identify their strengths, areas where they could develop further and/or move into different roles, and training needs.

Staff

A group of people employed by an organisation. See also Contractor, Workers.

Standard

An accepted or approved level of excellence or quality.

Statement of Purpose

A short summary of a museum's overarching aim.

Strategic plan

See Forward plan.

Strategy

Plan or technique for achieving set aims or objectives.

Succession / succession planning

Succession is the act, process or right by which one person succeeds to the office of another. Succession planning is part of managing an organisation's human resources with the future in mind. It involves evaluating the skills, knowledge and personal qualities needed for key roles in management and on governing bodies, and planning ways to effectively meet these needs should such roles have to be filled by new people.

Sustainability

'Forms of progress that meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their needs' (source: World Commission on Environment and Development).

Underlying philosophy

The beliefs, values or tenets that support an organisation's specific approach, policy or practice.

'Wind-up clause'

A statement in a museum's constitution or other legal framework to ensure that, in the event of the museum's permanent closure (or 'winding up'), the future of the collection is secured according to recognised museum ethics and codes of practice.

Workers

The personnel of a museum, employed or voluntary (paid or unpaid), part-time or full-time. See also Contractor, Staff and Volunteer.

Workplace health and safety (WHS)

A legal framework identifying and regulating health and safety issues in the workplace. These issues may affect, or could potentially affect, people in a place of work, in the activities they do there, or anywhere else they go as part of their work.
